

NO COPY OF THIS TRANSCRIPT MAY BE MADE PRIOR TO 3-20-2011

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT FOR THE DISTRICT OF NEW HAMPSHIRE

* * * * *

DARTMOUTH-HITCHCOCK CLINIC,	*
ET AL	*	11-CV-358-SM
	*	December 8, 2011
v.	*	9:45 a.m.
	*
NEW HAMPSHIRE DEPARTMENT OF	*
HEALTH AND HUMAN SERVICES,	*
COMMISSIONER	*
	*

* * * * *

TRANSCRIPT OF MOTION HEARING
BEFORE THE HONORABLE STEVEN J. MCAULIFFE

APPEARANCES:

For the Plaintiffs:	William L. Chapman, Esq. Orr & Reno, P.A. W. Scott O'Connell, Esq. Gordon J. MacDonald, Esq. Emily Pudan Feyrer, Esq. Anthony Galdieri, Esq. Nixon Peabody, LLP
For the Defendant:	Nancy J. Smith, Esq. Jeanne P. Herrick, Esq. Office of the Attorney General Civil Bureau
Court Reporter:	Susan M. Bateman, LCR, RPR, CRR Official Court Reporter United States District Court 55 Pleasant Street Concord, NH 03301 (603) 225-1453

1 P R O C E E D I N G S

2 THE CLERK: Court is in session and has for 3 consideration a motion hearing in Dartmouth-Hitchcock 4 Clinic, et al, versus New Hampshire Department of 5 Health and Human Services, Commissioner, civil case
6 number 11-CV-358-SM.

7 THE COURT: Now, as I recall -- Ms. Smith, 8 how are you doing?

9 MS. SMITH: Good.

10 THE COURT: As I recall our discussion in 11 chambers, you're just going to argue the law today and 12 present evidence in January.

13 MS. SMITH: Correct.

14 THE COURT: All right. So far we're on the 15 same page.

16 And then my law clerk and I had a little bit
17 of a disagreement about Mr. MacDonald. I think I said
18 to you 30(A) is up at the Supreme Court, let's wait
19 and see what the Supreme Court says about it, and you 20 agreed or disagreed?

21 MR. MACDONALD: Disagreed.

22 THE COURT: That's what he said. Okay. So
23 you're going to argue 30(A) as well?

24 MR. MACDONALD: Yes, your Honor.

25 THE COURT: Okay. Attorney Smith, good

1 morning.

2 MS. SMITH: My understanding -- that's how I
3 was going to start was by defining the scope of the 4 hearing today. My understanding is we're presenting 5 our arguments on the motion to dismiss, which is why
6 I'm standing up here first, which is the 30(A)
7 arguments, as well as the arguments we had on 13(A),
8 which is in our objection to the preliminary 9 injunction. And so both of those go to whether 10 there's a cause of action.

11 MR. MACDONALD: So may I, your Honor?

12 THE COURT: You're lead counsel, Mr.
13 MacDonald. Are you splitting it up or what?

14 MR. O'CONNELL: We are splitting it up. I
15 will be arguing the 30(A) issues and MacDonald 13(A) 16 and Chapman irreparable harm.

17 THE COURT: All right.

18 MR. MACDONALD: Just so I understand it on 19 the 13(A) piece of this, we're presenting our 20 arguments about whether Section 1983 provides a cause 21 of action or not.

22 MS. SMITH: Correct.

23 MR. MACDONALD: Okay.

24 MS. SMITH: Just so we're clear on what the 25 scope of the hearing is, there were some other legal

1 arguments raised in the preliminary injunction issues
2 and the preliminary injunction objection and replies.
3 I'm prepared to address those today, but if the Court
4 just wants to focus on the cause of action arguments
5 we can do that and save the other legal arguments 6 raised in the preliminary injunction for later.

7 THE COURT: It's up to you.

8 Mr. O'Connell, you are going to argue 30(A)
9 but not the supremacy 1983 issue?

10 MR. O'CONNELL: Correct. Well, 1983 -- to 11 the extent it's argued in the preliminary injunction, 12 Attorney MacDonald is covering it.

13 THE COURT: All right. Attorney Smith.

14 MR. MACDONALD: And just -- sorry, your 15 Honor.

16 THE COURT: It's all right.

17 MR. MACDONALD: Just so we get the terms, I
18 think it will benefit the Court, there was one other 19 issue we discussed in chambers, your Honor, that we 20 take up today. Mr. Chapman is prepared to take up the 21 legal standard governing irreparable harm.

22 MS. SMITH: And we're prepared to address
23 that. If you want me while I'm up here to address all 24 three of them, I'm prepared to go ahead and go first.
25 And then there are a couple of other legal issues that

1 we'll save until we see whether or not we're having a 2 further hearing.

3 THE COURT: All right. Now I'm concerned
4 about the court stenographer. What's your time 5 estimation?

6 MS. SMITH: It depends on how many questions
7 you have, your Honor.

8 THE COURT: Try to keep it to a minimum.

9 MS. SMITH: I don't think I have more than 20 10 to 30 minutes.

11 THE COURT: Okay. All right.

12 MS. SMITH: Turning first to the 30(A)
13 Supremacy Clause issues regarding the first four 14 counts of the plaintiffs' complaint which we address 15 in both our motion to dismiss and our objection to the 16 plaintiffs' preliminary injunction.

17 The plaintiffs concede that 30(A) -- and just 18 to be clear, I'm going to refer -- that stands for 19 42 U.S.C, 1396(a)(30)(A), which we abbreviate to refer 20 to as 30(A).

21 They agree that 30(A) as well as 1396a(b) and 22 42 C.F.R. 430.12 do not create a private cause of 23 action. Rather, they argue solely that they have 24 brought an Ex parte Young action, arguing that the 25 state's actions taken for budgetary reasons violate

1 the Medicaid statute on their face and are therefore 2 preempted by the Supremacy Clause.

3 Turning to the Ex Parte Young issue, the line
4 of cases allowing parties to seek injunctions under Ex 5 parte Young we submit depends on the nature of the 6 action that the plaintiffs are seeking to prevent 7 being a regulatory or statutory obligation imposing 8 affirmative obligation on the plaintiffs that they are 9 seeking to avoid.

10 That's the distinction between what they are 11 attempting to do here and the pharmaceutical case 12 versus Concannon, which was 249 F.3d 66, which was 13 affirmed by the United States Supreme Court where 14 there's no new affirmative obligation that the 15 plaintiffs are seeking to avoid.

16 It's also significant in the Concannon case
17 that the Court went on to find -- specifically find 18 that there was no preemption under the Medicaid 19 statute, and I'll talk about that more in my second 20 part of this argument.

21 But Ex parte Young -- it's important to 22 remember that Ex parte Young is a vehicle for creating 23 an exception to sovereign immunity -- to the Eleventh 24 Amendment sovereign immunity for the state, and it 25 doesn't really create a cause of action in its own

1 right. And that was discussed in a case called -- it
2 was Virginia Office of Protection and Advocacy versus 3 Stewart, 131 Supreme Court 1632. It's a 2011 case.
4 And they were very clear there that Ex parte Young is 5 jurisdictional.

6 It doesn't really answer the question of 7 whether there is a cause of action, and the Supreme 8 Court just affirmed -- reaffirmed in that case that Ex
9 parte Young does not apply where it would require -- 10 where the result would be to have an impact itself on 11 the state treasury or where it would interfere with 12 public administration -- with the public
13 administration of a program.

14 So those are some very -- and the recent 15 Douglas versus Independent Living case up at the 16 Supreme Court. If you read the transcript of the oral 17 argument, it's very clear that the Court was 18 struggling with the distinction between the Young line 19 of cases and their jurisdiction prudence on 20 requiring -- where there's an implied cause of action 21 in trying to make those two bodies of law consistent.

22 We submit that these --

23 THE COURT: One of the questions was if you
24 don't have a private cause of action but you have a 25 Supremacy Clause 1983, then how can you not have a

1 private cause of action.

2 MS. SMITH: But you only -- let me go into 3 those appointments because that's what I'm about to 4 launch into in my next comments.

5 When there is a -- just one final point on Ex
6 parte Young about the distinction between this being a 7 regulatory or enforcement action that I think may help
8 the Court understand that distinction is a concept 9 that we came across that applies to commerce clause 10 preemption cases where they talk about the concept of 11 market participation. And that says that preemption 12 doesn't apply to the state where it is acting as a 13 market participant. In other words, where it is 14 purchasing services rather than regulating. And 15 that's another way to look at the distinction that 16 we're drawing that may help clarify that distinction.

17 And some of those market participation cases 18 are Department of Revenue of Kentucky versus Davis, 19 553 U.S. 328, a 2008 case.

20 So going back to Ex parte Young and the 21 Supremacy Clause, what the plaintiffs are seeking to 22 do here is to do an end run around a need for there 23 being a cause of action. Because there's a number of 24 cases that we have pointed out in our brief that say
25 the Supremacy Clause itself --

1 THE COURT: You mean a private right of 2 action.

3 MS. SMITH: A private right of action. The 4 Supremacy Clause itself does not create a cause of 5 action. You have to look at the underlying statute to 6 see -- for there to be a cause of action. So they are 7 expressly trying to do an end run around that very 8 pointed lack of authority, which they concede. And as 9 the Supreme Court pointed out in the Astra case that 10 we cite, the absence of a private cause of action 11 would be rather meaningless if they could simply do an 12 end run around the need for a cause of action by 13 recasting their claim as something else.

14 Going back to that point about the Supremacy 15 Clause itself not creating -- being different than 16 other constitutional claims where the Court has found 17 that if there's a preemption claim that you
18 automatically can bring this Ex parte Young claim.
19 The Supremacy Clause is different than other 20 constitutional provisions, such as due process, equal 21 protection or the commerce clause because those 22 clauses -- the right is under the constitutional 23 provision itself. The Supremacy Clause is in a 24 different section of the Constitution, and it is not a 25 substitute provision. It's a jurisdictional

1 provision.

2 And again, for there to be Ex parte Young it
3 creates an exception to the state's Eleventh Amendment 4 to sovereign immunity and the question of whether 5 preemption goes to the underlying statute.

6 So turning to the preemption issue -- and we 7 present the preemption issue more in our objection to 8 the preliminary injunction if you're looking for the 9 section of our pleadings that brief that issue. But 10 many of the cases relied on by the plaintiff for there 11 being preemption, such as the Local 12004, or the 12 Golden case, arise in the field of labor relations.

13 And there's a very large body of precedent on 14 a national labor relations field that says that labor 15 relations are uniquely suited for the purposes of 16 federal preemption. And therefore we would submit 17 that those cases really have little value outside of 18 the realm of the National Labor Relations Act.

19 Secondly, the plaintiffs cite case law that 20 points out that preemption is not to enforce 21 litigants' private rights; yet we submit that is 22 exactly what the plaintiffs are seeking to do here.
23 They are very much seeking to force the state to pay 24 them more money prospectively. They are not seeking 25 to restore the balance of power that the Supremacy

1 Clause is concerned with between the federal 2 government and the state, but they are seeking to 3 protect their own body of law.

4 Going to the analysis of whether or not there 5 is preemption, there are several different kinds of 6 preemption that the cases talk about. The first is 7 express preemption. And we would -- reviewing all of 8 the pleadings, it doesn't appear that plaintiffs are 9 claiming that there's any sort of express preemption.
10 At most they rely on the standard preemption that's 11 referred to as implied preemption. And there are two 12 flavors to implied preemption.

13 The first is what's called field preemption.
14 And in the Pharmaceutical Research Manufacturers
15 Association versus Concannon, that's the 249 F.3d 66
16 First Circuit case which was also affirmed on appeal
17 at 538 U.S. 64, the First Circuit explicitly found no 18 field preemption intended by Medicaid laws in that 19 case pointing out that very large areas of 20 implementation of Medicaid law are very specifically 21 left to the discretion of states and that the purpose
22 of the Medicaid statutes are to advance a cooperative 23 federalism between the federal government and the 24 states, and that the purpose of Congress -- it was 25 explicitly the purpose of Congress in leaving out a

1 wide range of permissible phrases to the states.

2 And they also went on in a Massachusetts case
3 that we cite. In Re: Pharmaceutical Industry Average
4 Wholesale Prices also points out that medical fee
5 related regulations have traditionally been a field 6 occupied by the states.

7 In the preemption strand -- that leaves the 8 only basis for their claim of preemption being their 9 claim that the various state actions obstruct federal 10 purpose. And we submit that that simply doesn't carry 11 the day for them either.

12 There is no conflict between the purpose of 13 the Medicaid statute, which is to help low income or 14 disabled people get medical care, and the state's 15 interest in controlling costs so that it can continue 16 to provide the broadest coverage of services possible
17 and that controlling costs helps advance the purpose 18 of the Medicaid statute without cutting services, and 19 therefore it is consistent with the purpose of the 20 Medicaid statute.

21 Going back to the discussions around repeal
22 of the Boren Amendment, there was a lot of discussion 23 that private lawsuits were driving up the costs of 24 Medicaid. And I think there were some estimates in 25 there that private lawsuits cost states over -- at

1 that point in time over a billion dollars and that 2 also the private lawsuits interfered with the 3 administrative process between CMS and the states.

4 For example -- and again, going back to the 5 Concannon First Circuit case, that case found that 6 Maine's prior authorization requirement did not 7 conflict with the purpose of Medicaid even if it 8 failed to advance the purpose of the federal program.

9 And turning to a case that I'm sure the 10 plaintiffs will bring up, the recent Indiana lawsuit.
11 In September of 2011 that District Court in Indiana
12 vacated its prior TRO and denied a preliminary 13 injunction basically finding that there was no 14 conflict -- that there was no preemption under the 15 Supremacy Clause. And that case involved an attempt 16 to block the 38 percent rate reduction on broad 17 dispensing fees.

18 Again, the case law on preemption repeatedly 19 says that congressional intent is paramount. There's 20 a recent case in 2009 that makes that point again, the 21 Wyeth versus Levine case. That's at 555 U.S. 555, and 22 those numbers are the same.

23 So when you look at the congressional 24 intent -- and we're essentially right back at whether 25 Congress intended there to be private rights of action

1 under 30(A). And the intent was that there not be was 2 to put an end to provider suits. And again, that's 3 clearest in the repeal of the Boren Amendment in which 4 there were a number of statements that that was 5 Congress's intent.

6 But it is also demonstrated by the language
7 in 30(A) itself and the legislative history of 30(A)
8 which requires that states' rates promote efficiency 9 and economy, and that is to preserve states' 10 flexibility to control costs.

11 And the legislative history of 30(A) -- it
12 goes back to 1967, and there was actually -- and I 13 didn't have all of this history cited in 14 our pleadings, and I apologize for that, but the State
15 of California in their brief in the Douglas case did 16 do a legislative history of 30(A), and it goes -- as 17 they state, that it goes back to 1967 and it was 18 implemented as a cost saving measure to require states 19 to safeguard against unnecessary utilization and 20 therefore to help control federal costs.

21 So when you're looking at the purpose that 22 30(A) was initially adopted for, it was very much 23 to --

24 THE COURT: But your argument isn't -- I 25 didn't think your argument was we can just ignore the

1 federal statutory mandate in setting rates, we can 2 just ignore all of the factors we're supposed to 3 consider, and we can set rates based on our own fiscal 4 convenience.

5 I thought your argument was if we violated
6 the federal law in the sense that we didn't properly 7 consider the factors we're supposed to consider, well, 8 that's up to the Secretary to enforce.

9 MS. SMITH: That's also part of our argument.

10 THE COURT: It kind of has to be your 11 argument, doesn't it?

12 MS. SMITH: Yes.

13 THE COURT: I assume -- you're not in here to 14 say, look, we get to set the rates for our own fiscal 15 convenience and that's the end of it, right? Are you 16 arguing that?

17 MS. SMITH: Yes.

18 THE COURT: You are? Seriously?

19 MS. SMITH: We are arguing that rates --

20 THE COURT: The federal law is clear, right?
21 I mean, the State of New Hampshire said, yes, we'll 22 participate in this program and we'll do it under the 23 rules that you set down. The rules you set down are 24 we are going to consider a number of factors. We're 25 going to balance the law of interests here.

1 You can't seriously come in and say, we said
2 that we would do that but we don't really have to, and 3 in fact we're not.

4 MS. SMITH: But within those factors we 5 can still be --

6 THE COURT: I mean, if you stand here and 7 argue, we have the power to set rates based upon our 8 own fiscal interests, and the federal government, you 9 know, be darned, we're not doing what we said we would 10 do, then aren't you compelling the Secretary -- if 11 there is no private cause of action, aren't you really 12 compelling the Secretary to step in and say, oh, no, 13 you're not?

14 I mean, how can you make that argument under 15 the statute as its written? You're sort of daring the 16 Secretary to step in and say, no, you really aren't 17 free to do whatever you please. You've made a 18 commitment under the law to do it a certain way. You 19 can't stand up and say, look, but we're not going to 20 do it and nobody can do anything about it.

21 MS. SMITH: I think we would agree that the 22 Secretary can do something about it.

23 THE COURT: Okay. So the second half of the 24 question is: Are you really telling the Secretary 25 that we're setting these rates based on our own fiscal

1 convenience and for no other reason? Is that the 2 judicial admission you're making this morning?

3 MS. SMITH: Budgetary reasons were certainly 4 a factor, but the choices that were made taking into 5 account all of the --

6 THE COURT: But the argument the plaintiffs 7 are making is, it wasn't a factor. It was the only 8 factor. It wasn't a factor among many. It was the 9 factor.

10 MS. SMITH: As long -- it can be -- we would 11 contend that it can be the sole factor but that it
12 would be up to the Secretary to tell us --

13 THE COURT: Since we're on a roll, are you 14 saying it was the sole factor?

15 MS. SMITH: We're not agreeing with that 16 contention.

17 THE COURT: I don't know about that 18 contention. This is the contention. Are you saying 19 it was the sole factor?

20 MS. SMITH: No.

21 THE COURT: Okay. And what evidence is there 22 that some other factor was considered?

23 MS. SMITH: That critical access hospitals
24 rates were not reduced. And that was based on the 25 fact -- that a number of these actions that they

1 complain about were -- critical access hospitals were 2 exempted from them. And that was based on an 3 evaluation of the financial stability of those 4 hospitals, as well as a number of other factors about 5 access, which shows that we were considering the 6 factors that the federal program -- that the federal 7 government says we were supposed to consider. That 8 they had information about the financial stability of 9 the hospitals before they made these decisions. That 10 those were considered about whether or not this would 11 have -- these changes would be so severe that they 12 would have an adverse impact on access.

13 So there are a number -- that gets into the 14 facts. I'm not saying those are all of the factors.
15 Those are the things that we would be presenting in 16 the evidentiary hearing. I think we covered a lot 17 more of them in our pleadings, but those are the ones 18 that come to mind today.

19 Did I address your question, your Honor?

20 THE COURT: You did.

21 MS. SMITH: Okay.

22 THE COURT: But we don't have to spend a lot 23 of time on it. Well, it's up to you. But your 24 position here is 30(A) doesn't create a private cause 25 of action?

1 MS. SMITH: Right.

2 THE COURT: Section 1983, the Supremacy
3 Clause, who knows. The Supreme Court is going to 4 decide that this term.

5 MS. SMITH: Correct.

6 THE COURT: Do you want to move on to notes?

7 MS. SMITH: We hope they're going to decide
8 it. If they decide it on extremely narrow factual 9 grounds unique to the California case, there is the 10 possibility that -- it depends on how the case 11 comes -- you know, what they decide -- the facts that 12 they say are controlling in that decision.

13 So to wrap up the Supremacy Clause issue -- 14 and again, I will just -- to shorten the argument, the 15 State of California in their brief to the Supreme 16 Court in the Douglas case laid out the history -- the 17 legislative history of 30(A) at page 29 to 30 of their 18 brief, and we submit that when you look at the 19 intent -- preemption looks at the intention of 20 Congress, and the intent of 30(A) itself was to help
21 the federal government and states control costs. So 22 that's another factor, as the Court pointed out.

23 So we submit that there is not a private 24 cause of action, and that's distinct from the 25 jurisdictional question. And I think that was a

1 distinction that got lost in the Douglas argument, 2 that whether there's a cause of action is distinct 3 from whether the federal court has jurisdiction. And 4 I think the Solicitor General in the Douglas argument 5 tried to focus on that.

6 THE COURT: Really? I didn't think that was 7 an issue. I looked at the transcript of that oral 8 argument. There's no question it's a federal question
9 jurisdiction. But that's not the issue. The question 10 is, do you have a private right of action.

11 MS. SMITH: Right. Ex parte Young, though, 12 is jurisdictional. And that's why I think there was 13 some confusion in crossing those lines. Ex parte 14 Young gives the Court jurisdiction where it wouldn't 15 have it under the Eleventh Amendment.

16 THE COURT: Right. But that's not an issue 17 here, is it?

18 MS. SMITH: Correct. But that's why -- I'm 19 just saying Ex parte Young doesn't answer the question 20 of whether there's a cause of action.

21 THE COURT: Okay. I think I follow that.

22 MS. SMITH: So turning to the 13(A)
23 argument --

24 THE COURT: You're saying Ex parte Young 25 doesn't give rise to some freestanding private cause

1 of action?

2 MS. SMITH: Right.

3 THE COURT: 1983 is just a vehicle. The 4 Supremacy Clause you say doesn't give rise to a 5 freestanding cause of action?

6 MS. SMITH: Correct.

7 THE COURT: The Supreme Court will decide
8 that.

9 MS. SMITH: Correct.

10 THE COURT: And 30(A) you're saying doesn't 11 give rise to a statutory freestanding private cause of 12 action?

13 MS. SMITH: Right. And we believe they can 14 keep it that way. They haven't argued that 30(A) 15 gives rise to a statutory cause of action.

16 So I think that frames the 30(A) argument, 17 unless you have other questions, your Honor.

18 THE COURT: No.

19 MS. SMITH: So turning to the 13(A) argument,
20 which is in our objection to the preliminary 21 injunction. And they argue that 13(A) gives them a 22 cause of action under Section 1983.

23 It's interesting that 13(A) -- whether 24 there's a cause of action under the Blessing/Gonzaga 25 test is actually a more straightforward question

1 today. I'm aware that test is somewhat convoluted, 2 but given the complexity of the 30(A) issues, the 3 13(A) question is a little bit more straightforward, 4 or at least more well-trodden ground.

5 And we submit that the Blessing test as 6 refined by the Supreme Court in Gonzaga indicates that 7 there is not a private cause of action for either the 8 providers or beneficiaries under Section 13(A). That 9 it doesn't meet either of the first two prongs of that 10 test where Congress has said that -- the courts have 11 said that Congress has to have intended to benefit an 12 individualized plaintiff. And what they've looked at 13 is whether the -- it was referred to in the statute as 14 an aggregate group or individualized rights.

15 And here in 13(A) when they're talking about 16 the public process the group is indicated as 17 providers, beneficiaries, or any other interested 18 person. So it's really hard to think of any more 19 aggregate group since that would be potentially 20 everyone in society.

21 And the second part of the test is whether 22 the public process -- whether what's being required by 23 the statute is so vague and amorphous that courts 24 would have difficulty crafting standards to enforce 25 it.

1 And again, the public process leaves large
2 amounts of discretion to the state. It's a flexible 3 standard, and it does fit within that definition of 4 being so vague and amorphous that it was not intended 5 to create a private cause of action.

6 Looking at the case law since Gonzaga that 7 has addressed this issue specifically, two circuits
8 have addressed it, the Second Circuit and the Third 9 Circuit. In New York Association of Homes versus 10 DeBonis and Children's Seashore House, I think I've 11 got those names correct, and both of those cases have 12 rejected there being a cause of action under 13(A).

13 The only case that we are aware of that says 14 there could be a private cause of action is from one 15 district in Maine, and that's The American Society of 16 Pharmacists versus Concannon found that there was a 17 claim. That was not addressed in the Long Term Care 18 First Circuit case.

19 THE COURT: I was going to ask you about 20 that. I thought Judge Boudin in Long Term Care -- and 21 my memory is fading now, but I thought the First 22 Circuit just assumed that there was a 13(A) private 23 cause of action.

24 MS. SMITH: Correct. They assumed it because 25 they had an alternate basis which was much easier for

1 saying they didn't have a claim because pharmacists 2 were not within -- they said pharmacists were not 3 within 13(A) anyway, so they didn't have to do the 4 analysis.

5 THE COURT: Well, they were saying
6 pharmacists weren't within 30(A).

7 MS. SMITH: Right.

8 THE COURT: They weren't within 30(A). And 9 then they said, this isn't like 13(A), where of course
10 you would have a cause of action under 13(A). But not 11 under 30(A) because you're once removed from a -- 12 wasn't that it -- you're once removed from a direct 13 provider?

14 MS. SMITH: Correct.

15 THE COURT: You're a supplier to a provider.
16 The statute doesn't address suppliers to providers.

17 MS. SMITH: Correct. But they just assumed
18 that --

19 THE COURT: It would seem to be that if you 20 were a provider that would be different. You would 21 have a 13(A) cause of action.

22 MS. SMITH: They didn't do the analysis to 23 decide whether or not a provider would have 13(A).
24 They just assumed for the sake of the argument that 25 there may be a 13(A) claim.

1 THE COURT: Well, obviously I'll go back and 2 read it again, but my memory was it was a little bit 3 more than sort of off the cuff.

4 MS. SMITH: They didn't go through the 5 Gonzaga analysis to determine whether or not --

6 THE COURT: Well, I think he did, actually. I 7 think Judge Boudin made a point of saying that the 8 problem that the closed pharmacies had in that 9 situation was that the Supreme Court in Gonzaga had 10 already tightened it up and said, don't come in here 11 just saying somebody violated some federal law.
12 That's not going to be good enough. You've got to 13 come in here saying somebody violated a private cause 14 of action that you are entitled to that we can listen
15 to. That's 30(A).

16 This isn't like 13(A). 13(A), that would be 17 different. If you were a provider, you would have a 18 13(A) cause of action. You probably wouldn't even 19 have a 30(A) cause of action if you were a provider.
20 Wasn't that the analysis?

21 MS. SMITH: We submit that they did not 22 actually decide that.

23 THE COURT: Well, sure, you know, dicta
24 holding, all of that, but the assumption was anybody 25 analyzing this situation under Gonzaga would say, even

1 if you were a provider you didn't have a 30(A) cause
2 of action. You're not even a provider. 13(A), that 3 would be different, but you're not a provider.

4 MS. SMITH: We submit they didn't answer the 5 question of whether there was a 13(A) claim.

6 THE COURT: Okay. Do you think they hinted?

7 MS. SMITH: They hinted, but they didn't 8 address it and they didn't go through the full 9 analysis. And two other circuits since then have and 10 have rejected that.

11 THE COURT: But of course the First Circuit
12 is where I take my primary guidance, right?

13 MS. SMITH: That's correct. We understand
14 that.

15 So we submit that under the circuits that 16 have directly addressed the issue there is not a 13(A)
17 claim and that that claim -- so there would not be a 18 likelihood of success on the merits of that claim, 19 either.

20 THE COURT: Not that it's critical, but do 21 you happen to know, are either of those up on cert 22 petitions?

23 MS. SMITH: I don't believe either of those 24 circuit decisions have gone to the Supreme Court. Was 25 that your question?

1 THE COURT: Uh-huh.

2 MS. SMITH: I don't believe either of them
3 have been appealed.

4 Turning to the last issue that the plaintiffs 5 indicated they wanted to address that Mr. Chapman was 6 going to talk about, the presumption of irreparable 7 harm.

8 We briefed that in our surreply on the 9 preliminary injunction. As I understand the argument, 10 which was whether -- if you get to analyzing the 11 equitable requirements for issuing a preliminary 12 injunction, they claim that when you're trying to 13 enforce a statute you don't have to show an 14 irreparable harm. And we submit that the Supreme 15 Court has indicated that even where you're trying to 16 enforce a statute that traditional equitable 17 principles apply, and we cited authority for that in 18 our surreply.

19 I would also just point out that in the oral 20 argument before the Supreme Court in the Douglas case 21 the plaintiffs there were arguing that they had shown 22 irreparable harm. So they certainly weren't raising a 23 claim that they didn't have to meet that prong of 24 equitable jurisprudence in a similar claim, either.

25 THE COURT: So the irreparable harm for Mr.

1 Chapman's clients is fairly self-evident, isn't it?

2 MS. SMITH: That's getting into the facts,
3 and we weren't going to argue the facts today.

4 THE COURT: As a matter of law, isn't it
5 self-evident that Mr. Chapman's clients could 6 establish irreparable harm?

7 MS. SMITH: No. We believe they still --

8 THE COURT: I am severely ill. I could get 9 treatment but for your actions. Because of your 10 actions I can't get treatment. Money isn't going to 11 fix that. I'm going to suffer some loss that's going 12 to be irreparable. Why isn't that self-evident?

13 MS. SMITH: We are not aware of any 14 allegations that Mr. Chapman's client has not been 15 able to get treatment. It's just a conjectural 16 possibility that has not materialized.

17 THE COURT: You're saying if he had a client 18 that fit that description that would be different, but 19 all he's got is a theory?

20 MS. SMITH: There are many doctors that will 21 accept Medicaid. If the one that he has been seeing 22 specifically won't, we will find him one that does.
23 There are hospitals -- the Lakes Region Hospital --

24 THE COURT: That's an interesting point. Can 25 you blunt irreparable harm by volunteering to

1 remediate it? I'm not sure you can, but maybe you
2 can. I suppose if you're willing to do it then 3 there's no irreparable harm, right? That's a pretty 4 broad category of volunteerism.

5 MS. SMITH: The issue was whether or not -- a 6 doctor is one issue, but what we're talking about 7 here --

8 THE COURT: We're talking about patients.

9 MS. SMITH: And there's no allegation that he 10 cannot be seen at the hospital that he's been going 11 to. That hospital is the sole exception to Medicaid.
12 If he needs to --

13 THE COURT: Right. We discussed that in 14 chambers, right. You're saying it's a vote with your 15 feet situation, and they're not voting with their feet 16 yet.

17 MS. SMITH: Correct.

18 THE COURT: What if they vote with their 19 feet? Then is there irreparable harm? Is then the 20 argument, well, but there's some other hospital you 21 can go to within some distance?

22 MS. SMITH: Medicaid doesn't require that 23 every provider be enrolled in Medicaid.

24 THE COURT: No. Of course not. But to a
25 Medicaid patient, as I understand it, you're supposed

1 to be setting the rates and managing the system in 2 such a way that reasonable medical services are 3 available for people that otherwise couldn't afford 4 them.

5 So you can't shut the system down and say,
6 well, you know, Arkansas has hospitals, why don't you 7 go to Arkansas, right? You can't do that. It's got 8 to be in New Hampshire and it's got to be services 9 reasonably available and the system has to be 10 operating in such a way that that's a reality, right?

11 MS. SMITH: Yes.

12 THE COURT: So at some point I guess the 13 reality is there is irreparable harm because a patient 14 can't get medical services and would suffer losses 15 that money is not going to compensate for.

16 MS. SMITH: At some point there certainly 17 could be.

18 THE COURT: And what you're saying is right 19 now he doesn't have a client that fits that profile.

20 MS. SMITH: Correct.

21 THE COURT: Okay.

22 MS. SMITH: And I think I concluded my 23 primary presentation. And depending on any arguments
24 that are presented that I haven't anticipated, I guess 25 I would like an opportunity to --

1 THE COURT: Yes. Certainly. Absolutely.

2 Thank you, Attorney Smith. I appreciate it.

3 MR. O'CONNELL: Good morning, your Honor.

4 Scott O'Connell.

5 THE COURT: Good morning, Mr. O'Connell. How 6 are you doing?

7 MR. O'CONNELL: Thank you for the opportunity
8 to argue the 30(A) issue. I would limit my comments 9 to that.

10 Three principle points. The state relies on 11 arguments that have been tried recently in three 12 different forums and rejected. And they've been 13 rejected because the notion -- or the construction of 14 Ex parte Young that the state wants to rely on is just 15 not supported by law, and it's based on a fundamental 16 misapprehension of what this case is about.

17 It is not a cause of action for money
18 damages. And throughout the state's papers you will 19 look at that stalking horse argument and try to take 20 our case -- and I'll describe our case in a minute -- 21 and turn it into something it's not.

22 There is a piece of our case that Mr.
23 MacDonald will argue, and that is the private cause of 24 action. But the first four claims deal with the 25 supremacy of federal law and constrictions and

1 restrictions on the State of New Hampshire to comply 2 with that law.

3 And it's our contention that by passing law
4 RSA 126 that provides for the changes to the Medicaid 5 reimbursement program for the financial convenience of 6 the state is in violation of federal law.

7 And we don't argue for a second -- and I just 8 want to clarify a couple of things because I think 9 these concepts get muddled through the pleadings. Ms.
10 Smith is correct. We are not claiming that our ten 11 possible provider clients have a private cause of 12 action under 30(A). Let's just get that out of the 13 case right now. That's not what we're here to say.

14 We are here to say that for more than a 15 hundred years it has been the law of this country 16 under Ex parte Young that when a state tries to 17 contravene by its laws federal supreme law of the 18 land, then an Ex parte Young action exists. And it 19 exists as a matter of affirmative law or defensive 20 law. And I can go through that. It's in our papers.

21 But let me address the first issue you put on 22 the table which is --

23 THE COURT: It's an interesting argument, but 24 isn't one of the major flaws that the federal law that 25 you're talking about is a federal law that says, and

1 if you don't comply the Secretary will make a decision
2 as to what sanctions to impose, and you know, may kick
3 you out, may stop funds, may do all kinds of other 4 things in an effort to try to work this out and make 5 this system go?

6 MR. O'CONNELL: Yes.

7 THE COURT: And so that's the remedy and 8 that's the law. So incorporated in the law is this 9 notion that it's not just, you must do this. It's a 10 combination of things. You must do this or the 11 Secretary might do that. And you're in here saying, 12 no, no, no. It's just a you must do this, and I'm 13 here as a citizen with an Ex parte Young injunctive 14 cause of action to make you do what you said you would 15 do.

16 But what the state said they would do is, 17 we'll do this and we'll suffer the consequences that 18 the Secretary might decide to impose if he or she 19 doesn't like what we're doing, and you're forgetting 20 that part of it, it seems to me.

21 MR. O'CONNELL: Not forgetting it. We 22 recognize it, but that is not the case. There is no 23 suggestion that that's an exclusive remedy in the 24 regulations or the law, so that needs to be 25 acknowledged in the beginning. You're absolutely

1 right.

2 THE COURT: I mean, I know you've thought of 3 this so I can't wait to hear your answer. The 4 Secretary decides, you know, it's an election year.
5 New Hampshire has got a primary. I don't think I want
6 to get up there and start pushing New Hampshire around 7 over these things. Let's see if we can't mediate and 8 cogitate and discuss and work it out, and you know, 9 maybe come 2013 we'll talk about it in serious terms.

10 And in comes Scott O'Connell and says, well, 11 that might be okay for the administration of the 12 federal government, but I want to enforce this mandate 13 right this second. That kind of messes up the 14 congressional intent on federal comity and let's work 15 together and let's not get ugly with each other if we 16 don't have to.

17 So why would Congress want that to be the end 18 result? And why would Ex parte Young say whatever 19 Congress wants, so what, Scott O'Connell gets to do 20 that?

21 MR. O'CONNELL: I'm sure they weren't 22 thinking about Scott O'Connell. That's for sure.

23 THE COURT: Well, as a representative of the 24 litigant.

25 MR. O'CONNELL: I do recognize that, your

1 Honor.

2 A couple points in response, because we have 3 thought about this at great length. There are very 4 limited remedies under the CMS regulation. One is to 5 just stop the funding of the so-called nuclear option.
6 That effectively does a body blow to the entire 7 healthcare system of the state. It's been invoked 8 once that we know about in Missouri. Not a very 9 effective vehicle for the type of mediation and 10 control that you're talking about, point one.

11 Point two is that at the very primal level 12 here, in order to get some type of oversight by your 13 regulator, you have to submit yourself, your plans and 14 your methodologies to the regulator.

15 The record before you is replete. And I 16 think this starts to feel like the injunction 17 argument. I will address it now, but I think Mr.
18 MacDonald will address it as well in some fashion.

19 The state has taken the position since 2008 20 that no plan amendments that detail the change in 21 state law that conflicts with federal law needs to be 22 given to the administrator. So they have created a 23 closed loop ecosystem where they make the rules.
24 They're not accountable to me under the hypothetical 25 we're talking about on behalf of the providers. And

1 they're not accountable to the regulator because they 2 haven't told the regulator they changed the rules.
3 That's a pretty good system.

4 So I guess there is a set of facts that we 5 could contemplate. And these were some of the 6 arguments that the Supreme Court had colloquy on in 7 the Douglas case, which is there is a rule for 8 deference to the administrator, absolutely, and that 9 is the federal system here. And that has been charged 10 with the relevant information and expertise to make 11 some of the judgments I think that are built into your 12 hypothetical, but necessarily they've got to bring 13 those plan evidence forward so that the regulator's 14 jurisdiction is invoked. They haven't done that.

15 The changes that are imbedded in RSA 126
16 which talk about balancing the budget and making 17 reimbursement changes to meet that financial 18 convenience have never been tendered to CMS.

19 And so we are left with the Ex parte Young 20 vehicle, which I'll note for the Court the Douglas 21 case found this cause of action. The Rell case in 22 Connecticut found this cause of action. That went up
23 to the Second Circuit and got dismissed because it 24 was found in that case -- and I just want to note the 25 distinction there. If you read it, you'll see there

1 was no procedural violation of 30(A) found in the 2 Second Circuit, and that's the conflict between the 3 Ninth Circuit and the Second Circuit on the procedural 4 issue, part of which will be decided by the Supreme 5 Court.

6 But it got to the Second Circuit because they 7 found an Ex parte Young cause of action. And most 8 recently in Indiana the same issue. The Court 9 there -- and we've cited this in our papers but I'll 10 paraphrase -- said, we know the Supreme Court is 11 taking up this issue, but it would be a gross 12 departure of a hundred years of law to deny these 13 providers the cause of action for declaratory relief.
14 And until the Supreme Court tells me otherwise, I'm 15 going to proceed and make a decision.

16 So I guess if we had a different set of facts 17 and we had a state that was fully transparent on what 18 it was doing with its regulator there might be an 19 argument, but that's not our case.

20 So in this set of circumstances where the 21 state has not amended its plan there is no regulatory 22 oversight to be deferential to. And so we get back to 23 what is this case about. It's not a cause of action
24 for damages. It's saying, State of New Hampshire, 25 apply federal law. It is the law of the land. You

1 are a voluntary participant in this federal program.
2 For every dollar you raise and spend you get a federal 3 dollar, and you've got to comply with the rules. And 4 one of the rules you paraphrased. You've got to 5 ensure a delivery system that ensures equal access to 6 those in the Medicaid plan and you have to think about 7 that when you make changes. And if you don't think 8 about that, that's a violation of law.

9 And all we are saying -- and again, getting 10 the stalking horse issue out of here -- is don't write 11 a check to any of our ten clients because we're 12 showing you a damages claim. We're simply saying, 13 you've got to throw that law out to the extent it is 14 preempted by federal law. And let me get into 15 preemption for one minute.

16 THE COURT: Well, you're not saying -- well, 17 maybe you are. You're not saying that 126 is 18 preempted.

19 MS. SMITH: Yes.

20 THE COURT: You're saying the content of 126
21 wasn't submitted to the regulator as a plan amendment.

22 MR. O'CONNELL: We're saying both. Well, 23 we're saying three things. On its face 126 is 24 preempted because it conflicts with federal law 25 because it doesn't mirror the federal requirements.

1 For example --

2 THE COURT: Why doesn't it? It's a very
3 narrow focused factor, if you will. As Attorney Smith
4 argued, it's a factor among many. It's not 5 necessarily the factor.

6 MR. O'CONNELL: If you read 126, I would 7 submit to you it's the factor -- the only factor the 8 state considers.

9 THE COURT: You would read it in connection 10 with the state's Medicaid plan and in connection with 11 federal law that requires the plan to consider a 12 certain amount of factors. Wouldn't you read it all 13 together? It wouldn't be in isolation.

14 MR. O'CONNELL: Yes, I guess. But under 15 normal statutory construction you want to rationalize 16 the whole constellation of relevant laws. You're 17 absolutely right. However, if you read it, it says
18 that the commissioner of HHS if they need to balance 19 the budget can make changes and submit it to Joint 20 Fiscal. None of the 13(A) arguments need to be 21 complied with going with notice and compliance, and 22 they can just balance the budget based on that.

23 So I would submit -- and when we get to the 24 evidence in the injunction -- and again, here we are 25 on a motion to dismiss. So fortunately for the state

1 the Court is going to assume that we plead this 2 accordingly, but the facts you will hear is that the 3 only thing the state considered was balancing the 4 budget. The only thing. They did not look at the 5 delivery system. They did not look at the impact and 6 access issues. It's just an absolutely vacant record.

7 So if we're right about that -- if the 8 evidence is going to be that, we've at least got an as 9 applied challenge to 126 as being preempted. We think 10 there's a direct facial challenge and you cannot 11 reconcile the limitation of that language with the 12 30(A) ending.

13 It's possible that without following the 14 strictures of 126 they could ultimately comply with 15 30(A), but that's by accident, not by design.

16 THE COURT: I apologize for going back, but 17 you made an interesting point. Would you change your 18 view if 126 was made known to the regulator, the 19 federal regulator, saying, oh, by the way, we're going 20 to amend our state claim and note in our state claim 21 that we have RSA 126, and on occasion RSA 126 may 22 dictate the rate changes. Then would you agree it's 23 kind of up to the Secretary at that point? There's no 24 federal preemption because all federal law requires is 25 that you note the elements of your plan so the

1 Secretary can make sure they conform and take 2 appropriate action if the Secretary thinks that they 3 don't.

4 MR. O'CONNELL: A couple things are buried in 5 that hypothetical that I will just squirrel out.

6 THE COURT: It's interesting. It's unique,
7 obviously, in respect to you don't usually have a 8 state saying we have a plan and we're going to do all 9 these things, but we have a side deal just among 10 ourselves that we're not -- but if you tell the 11 regulator, oh, by the way, our plan is we'll do all 12 these things, except which we don't.

13 Isn't it then up to the Secretary to decide, 14 is that consistent, is that inconsistent, what 15 sanctions, what actions should I take in terms of 16 enforcement? You wouldn't then have an Ex parte Young 17 challenge, right?

18 MR. O'CONNELL: We wouldn't have an Ex parte 19 Young challenge on the fact that this conflicts with 20 federal law in this respect.

21 Let me back up for one second. 126 has been 22 disclosed to the Secretary but the changes --

23 THE COURT: Well, you know, of course it's 24 public law. Everybody is instructively aware of it.

25 MR. O'CONNELL: Right. There's that, okay,

1 and there's this reference in the state plan to a 2 prior version.

3 The problem is it was amended to allow for 4 this budgetary driven end result, which is if you 5 don't have enough money you can make the changes for 6 the convenience of the state to balance the books.

7 THE COURT: I take your point, but as I said,
8 it's kind of unique. But assume the state plan is -- 9 it's the state plan. But the last element of our 10 state plan, Mr. Secretary and Ms. Secretary, is when 11 we want to for budgetary reasons, and solely for those 12 reasons, we will reduce the rates, and that's our 13 plan.

14 MR. O'CONNELL: If that had happened and if 15 the state had -- if CMS had passed on that without any 16 guidance. The way that process works is you tender it 17 and CMS usually says, we'll agree to that as a ground 18 rule, or no, it's not acceptable.

19 If we had those sets of facts, then the next 20 stage we would be at is, okay, when you did your 21 budgetary changes did you also comply with the other 22 requirements of 30(A).

23 It's one thing to disclose it to the 24 Secretary and say, we're not going to do this, and 25 say, okay, we think under certain circumstances that's

1 okay, but have you done the analysis and have you on a
2 substantive basis ensured that whatever changes you
3 make will provide equal access to Medicaid patients, 4 and that still is a cause of action that's very much 5 alive in this case.

6 And at the end of it, it is our burden to 7 prove that substantive case. That's not what we're 8 here to do today. The question is what's the cause of 9 action.

10 THE COURT: Before I confuse myself -- I know
11 I'm not going to please you, but before I confuse 12 myself, what you're saying now is the basic problem 13 here is the state plan does not admit of RSA 126.
14 It's an off the reservation controlling factor.

15 MR. O'CONNELL: Absolutely.

16 THE COURT: And, therefore, there might be Ex 17 parte Young injunctive cause of action with respect to 18 that statute.

19 MR. O'CONNELL: Absolutely. Absolutely. So 20 let's build out that hypothetical some more. 126 gets 21 amended. It says that we can take these actions. We 22 have one bucket of money, but if we have more claims 23 than necessary we're not going to worry about what the 24 services are that we're going to deliver. We're just 25 going to cut that pie into really small pieces. And 1 so you don't get 50 cents on a dollar as a provider.

2 You get 30 cents on a dollar.

3 The question is, what does that do to the 4 delivery system. Can you vote with your feet? And is 5 that the policy choice that the state is making?

6 I'll submit when you hear the injunctive
7 relief one of the providers did vote with their feet, 8 told the state that they were not going to be 9 accepting Medicaid patients, and the state responded 10 by asking the attorney general to investigate whether 11 or not the healthcare system was complying with its 12 mission.

13 So it's really a false choice. Vote with 14 your feet, but we're going to come after you and 15 investigate you and bring the full force of the state 16 against you. That's a Hobson's choice. That's not an 17 acceptable choice.

18 So voting with your feet given that reaction 19 that's happened in the context of this case, together 20 with how the requirements work, you know, protecting 21 life and limb in emergent situations, make it very 22 complex. I think a fair minded person would say no 23 healthcare system can simply vote with their feet.
24 There are many strings that are attached to this. But 25 again, that's for the injunctive argument.

1 Coming back to your very important questions
2 about the law here. So if we have a 126 which says
3 that a factor could be the budget convenience, okay, 4 we still have a cause of action if substantively the 5 state hasn't done an analysis to determine what the 6 impact would be, or we can show through John Does or 7 through other evidence that we bring forward that the 8 choices made are not complying on a substantive basis
9 with 30(A), and those are the two pieces of this case.

10 We realize that's our burden. We have to 11 bring that forward and we'll do that, but that is not 12 the issue today. The issue is whether there's a cause 13 of action.

14 And the three cases -- again, I referenced 15 this before -- have already decided this. And I'll 16 point you to the First Circuit, too. One of the 17 arguments that you didn't hear from Ms. Smith a moment 18 ago, but it's in her papers, is that Ex parte Young 19 only applies in a defensive circumstance when the 20 state is coming after you, and that's just not the 21 law. Local Union, a 2004 case, makes quite plain, a 22 claim that a state regulation is preempted by a 23 federal statute need not always arise as a defense 24 when injunctive relief is sought against state 25 officials.

1 So it is an equitable remedy that is to 2 ensure that federal law when it's being transcended in 3 a conflict situation will apply.

4 So I guess I would submit in answer to the 5 question that you gave me about 15 minutes ago: Mr.
6 O'Connell, do you have the ability to come here and 7 make these arguments under Ex parte Young? I would 8 say yes. To the extent that state law as written or 9 as applied conflicts with any federal law, Scott
10 O'Connell, Gordon MacDonald, anybody in this courtroom
11 has the ability to come in here and say, Judge, please 12 look at the conflict here and determine that the state 13 law is inappropriately being applied, transcends into 14 supreme law of the land, and make it null and void.
15 And that's what our cause of action is.

16 THE COURT: Thank you. I appreciate it.

17 MR. O'CONNELL: Thank you, your Honor.

18 THE COURT: Mr. MacDonald.

19 MR. MACDONALD: Good morning, your Honor.
20 Thanks for your time today. I'm here to talk about 21 Counts 5 and 6 of the plaintiff's complaint. Those 22 raise -- those counts seek to enforce the plaintiff's 23 rights under Section 13(A) of the Medicaid Act.

24 And I know the Court is very familiar with 25 Gonzaga/Blessing, and I think, your Honor, I would

1 just like to pick up on your colloquy with Attorney
2 Smith with respect to the state of the law,
3 particularly in this circuit. And it's obvious that 4 the Court has read the First Circuit's opinion in the 5 Long Term Care case. Chief Judge Boudin -- chief 6 judge at the time. Judge Boudin, Judge Lynch and 7 Judge Lipez were on that panel. And the Court is 8 absolutely right that that case came up to the First 9 Circuit presenting both 13(A) and 30(A) claims. And 10 the actual holding in the case is that the 30(A) claim 11 did not give rise to a cause of action under Section 12 1983. This is a post-Gonzaga case. And in that 13 holding the circuit had to overrule its prior case in 14 the Bullen case.

15 The second part of the case dealt with 16 Section 13(A), and the Court was -- your Honor is 17 absolutely right. The distinction there is that the 18 plaintiff in the case, a set of closed pharmacies, 19 were not covered under Section 13(A). Section 13(A) 20 grants rights to hospitals and nursing care
21 facilities, and Judge Boudin ultimately held that a 22 closed pharmacy, even one serving a nursing care 23 facility, did not have rights under --

24 THE COURT: That was not a nursing home.

25 MR. MACDONALD: Exactly. But the case

1 warrants very careful attention. And your Honor said,
2 well, the First Circuit gave us some hints. And if I
3 may, your Honor, I think the hints are overwhelming.

4 Judge Boudin wrote, "Broadly speaking, 5 subsection 13(A) requires something on the order of 6 notice and comment rulemaking for states in their 7 setting of rates for reimbursement of hospital 8 services, nursing facility services, and services of 9 intermediate care facilities for the mentally retarded 10 provided under the Medicaid Act".

11 Another quote, "Subsection 13(A) does provide 12 notice and comment rights as to rates set for nursing 13 facility services". And as we know under Gonzaga, 14 that is the touchstone; does the statute create a 15 right.

16 Judge Boudin, another section of the case,
17 "Subsection 30(A), unlike subsection 13(A), has no 18 "rights creating language" and identifies no discrete 19 class of beneficiaries". And this goes to the point 20 you were making with Attorney Smith.

21 Another part of the case -- in making the 22 distinction between providing notice and comments for 23 rates as to nursing facilities and not pharmacies, the 24 panel observed that Congress "could have thought that 25 embattled care facilities like hospitals and nursing

1 homes needed special protection from arbitrary rates
2 but that ordinary pharmacies did not".

3 And finally, your Honor, in this case,
4 "It is easy to imagine why Congress wanted special 5 protection for care facilities. Their sunk-cost 6 structure makes them especially vulnerable to slow 7 destruction by long-term underfunding; by contrast, 8 the market reaction is likely to be quick and decisive 9 if the Commonwealth seeks to underpay for drugs".

10 One other case that's very important for the 11 Court's consideration, another First Circuit case both 12 parties cited, is the Rio Grande versus Rullan case.
13 It's a case that came up from Puerto Rico. It dealt 14 with interpreting another section of the Medicaid Act 15 and ultimately concluded that another section of the 16 Medicaid Act dealing with reimbursements for federally
17 qualified health centers did give rise to a Section 18 1983 cause of action. That decision written by Chief 19 Judge Lynch. And Judge Howard and Judge Campbell were 20 on that panel.

21 I would direct the Court's attention to -- 22 she does a survey of the law post-Gonzaga in the 23 Medicaid context in this circuit, and she notes the 24 Long Term Care. She notes another case called 25 Brighton (ph.) which dealt with another section of the

1 Medicaid Act. But in talking about Long Term Care -- 2 and this is footnote 11, your Honor -- she says, "In 3 the same opinion --", referring to Long Term Care.
4 "In the same opinion, however, the Court assumed that 5 a different provision, Section 13(A), was enforceable
6 under Section 1983 because it contained "rights 7 creating language" and was narrowly written with a 8 discrete class of beneficiaries in mind."

9 So Attorney Smith properly points out to the 10 Court that this is dicta, and certainly I would 11 acknowledge that, but I would respectfully suggest to 12 the Court that there may be degrees of dicta and here 13 we have four of the --

14 THE COURT: Only if you want to use it, I 15 suppose.

16 MR. MACDONALD: Well, as a practical matter, 17 you have four of the six active judges essentially 18 acknowledging that Section 13(A) creates rights
19 creating language and is narrowly tailored and speaks 20 to an individualized rather than an aggregate class of 21 beneficiaries. And those are two of the three prongs 22 that Judge Lynch lays out in the Rio Grande case.

23 The third prong, and this is something that 24 Attorney O'Connell --

25 THE COURT: Is there much law out there on

1 the difference between aggregate and individualized 2 beneficiaries?

3 MR. MACDONALD: It's a gloss that Judge
4 Lynch -- you know, I first saw --

5 THE COURT: What does it mean, I guess?

6 MR. MACDONALD: I think as a practical matter 7 it is --

8 THE COURT: If you say all firemen, is that 9 aggregate of all firemen?

10 MR. MACDONALD: Well, let's just take it in 11 the context of this case. The State's argument is 12 that the language of Section 13(A) suggests 13 aggregation because it applies to --

14 THE COURT: Well, any interested party.

15 MR. MACDONALD: -- any interested party. On 16 that point, your Honor, I would point the Court to the 17 Concannon case, the case decided by Judge Singal in 18 Maine, and he directly addresses this. It's a very 19 interesting case. It came literally weeks after 20 Gonzaga. And he said, no, you can't read the other 21 interested citizens to mean everyone in the state. It 22 is modified by the language before it.

23 In other words, we're talking about rights 24 going to providers, beneficiaries, their 25 representatives, and other interested parties in the 1 state. I'm not quoting it exactly, but that's the 2 essence of the language. And the district court in 3 Maine said --

4 THE COURT: Meaning somebody like a provider.

5 MR. MACDONALD: Exactly. Exactly. And I
6 would submit that's the guidance for this Court on 7 that issue.

8 In any event, you know, I think you have this 9 fairly compelling description of --

10 THE COURT: The easy answer is that's not us 11 anyway.

12 MR. MACDONALD: Right. I mentioned the 13 Concannon case. One other case that's very worth the 14 time to take a look at is the underlying district 15 court case of Long Term Care. Judge Tauro granted an 16 injunction. Interesting facts. The Mass Department 17 of HHS noticed on their website an intent to reduce 18 certain pharmacy rates on March 17th, effective April 19 1st, and Judge Tauro applied the Concannon case and 20 ultimately determined that there was a cause of action
21 obviously under Section 1983 for both 13(A) and 30(A).

22 The facts though -- and then he went on to 23 reach and grant an injunction. And the facts there 24 are interesting, which are that he granted the 25 injunction on the basis that an emergency rule was

1 insufficient to meet the requirements of Section
2 13(A), and he went on to note that the statute 3 requires the ability of the protected parties to have 4 an opportunity to review and comment rates before they 5 go into effect. And obviously it was that decision 6 that went on up to the First Circuit and was reversed.

7 But I would submit those four cases from this 8 circuit should guide your determination of the issue
9 under Section 1983.

10 Attorney Smith is quite right, there is a 11 line of cases arising from the Second Circuit which 12 reaches a contrary conclusion. I would invite the 13 Court to look at the -- do the forensics on it, go 14 back to the first case under that line that was 15 decided, it's a case out of the northern district, and 16 you will not see a really meaningful analysis under 17 Gonzaga. And the district court judge there really 18 does not apply the Gonzaga analysis. With respect, 19 it's sort of a cursory determination.

20 That goes up and its affirmed in three 21 paragraphs by the Second Circuit. No meaningful 22 analysis. And then two other district courts in the 23 Second Circuit, one in Vermont, and the Rell case
24 which Attorney O'Connell referred to sort of summarily 25 apply their circuit law, as abbreviated and cursory as 1 it was.

2 Getting to the application of the test: Does 3 Section 30(A) have rights creating language? I think 4 Judge Boudin and Judge Lynch are absolutely correct.
5 It does. It provides very specifically and in clear, 6 understandable and, very importantly, enforceable
7 terms what needs to happen. It needs to be a public
8 process. The state needs to publish rates. It needs 9 to publish the methodology and it needs to publish the 10 justifications. Then providers, beneficiaries, other 11 interested parties, need to have the opportunity for 12 reasonable comment -- a reasonable opportunity for 13 comment.

14 Then the state needs to republish the final 15 rates, republish the methodology, and republish the 16 justifications presumably based on the information 17 they've gotten from the comment.

18 THE COURT: If the state were to -- if I were 19 to hold, you're absolutely right, they've got to do 20 that, injunctive relief issues until it's done, and 21 they do it and what they say is, these are the rates, 22 the methodology is RSA 126, this is what we're going 23 to do, let's have your comments. You comment and you 24 say, oh, boy, that would be contrary to the 25 requirements of federal law. You say thank you very

1 much. Here's the rate. Then you don't have a 13(A) 2 cause of action at all, right, because the process has 3 been satisfied?

4 MR. MACDONALD: I would agree with the Court.

5 THE COURT: Okay.

6 MR. MACDONALD: But they have not. The state
7 simply has not done that. And very importantly, your 8 Honor, Section 13(A) has a specific requirement for 9 hospitals, as opposed to nursing care and intermediate 10 area care facilities. They need to articulate how the 11 rates serve those hospitals which provide a 12 disproportionate share of care to the needy -- the low 13 income population.

14 We've talked about -- so the tests are rights 15 creating language, very clear and, importantly, 16 enforceable. Courts do this all the time. This is in 17 the realm of a due process, APA type remedies. Was 18 there -- did they publish the rates? Did they publish 19 the justifications or not? I mean, it's clearly 20 enforceable.

21 THE COURT: You know, I'm probably jumping
22 ahead, but just because I'll forget, why don't we do 23 it now. Did we agree that we were going to hear legal 24 arguments on the motions to dismiss? We're going to 25 defer evidence on the preliminary injunction till

1 later, but did I understand that there's really no
2 dispute about the facts relating to the 13(A) claims?

3 MS. SMITH: They claim no notice. We claim
4 there was notice. So, yes, there's a dispute.

5 THE COURT: Okay.

6 MR. MACDONALD: I would suggest, your Honor,
7 that I think that we could work together to come up 8 with a stipulated record about what actually happened 9 and sort of -- and hopefully cut down on sort of the 10 tedious evidence with respect to that.

11 THE COURT: I was just asking procedurally.
12 That's deferred to January?

13 MR. MACDONALD: Yes, your Honor.

14 THE COURT: Hopefully you can work it out, 15 but if you can't you will put on evidence on what 16 notice was given, if any.

17 MR. MACDONALD: Exactly, your Honor.

18 THE COURT: Okay.

19 MR. MACDONALD: So rights creating language, 20 individualized versus aggregate, and finally, is there 21 an effective enforcement mechanism. And again, this 22 is something that Attorney O'Connell got into.

23 There are two enforcement mechanisms as a 24 practical matter under the Medicaid Act. One is to 25 disapprove a state plan, and two is to cut off

1 funding. Neither apply in this situation.

2 The state has claimed that as to a vast 3 majority of the rates at issue in this case they don't 4 need to submit a state plan amendment to CMS. That 5 it's perfectly -- they're perfectly authorized to do 6 so under the existing state plan.

7 And as Attorney O'Connell suggested, the 8 second remedy, cutting off funds, is so blind as to be 9 meaningless. I mean, it puts the federal government 10 in a position of cutting off care as an effective 11 matter to the entire Medicaid population.

12 So this statute is uniquely enforceable to 13 Section 1983. And indeed its purpose is so important 14 that to cut off an enforcement through 1983 would 15 really be undermining what was clearly --

16 THE COURT: But you're talking about judicial 17 remedies here. The cut-off of funds is a remedy
18 reserved for the Secretary.

19 MR. MACDONALD: Correct. But part of the 20 test under Gonzaga is an analysis -- or at least under 21 Judge Lynch's gloss under Gonzaga is what other 22 enforcement mechanisms exist, and so I'm just -- what 23 other enforcement mechanisms did Congress contemplate.
24 And I'm saying here that they are ineffective.

25 THE COURT: Oh, I'm sorry. Ineffective.

1 MR. MACDONALD: Ineffective. As a practical
2 matter, just so the Court knows, CMS would know one
3 way or another whether the rates have been published 4 and all of the hoops you have to jump through for 5 Section 13(A) have happened or have not happened.

6 THE COURT: Why? I mean, why? It seems to 7 me the Secretary at any time could step in and say,
8 gee, I noticed you've published this statute, and I
9 can't help but notice that it seems to be facially
10 contrary to the federal requirements of the Medicaid 11 program. What do you have to say for yourself?

12 MR. MACDONALD: That could happen. But I'm 13 saying there's no affirmative obligation on behalf of 14 a state to tell CMS every time that it's going to 15 adjust rates that we've noticed it and we've met all 16 of the requirements of Section 13(A).

17 THE COURT: I missed that. All right. You
18 better do that again. I missed that -- that point.
19 You're saying the state does not have an obligation?

20 MR. MACDONALD: That's correct. Under 13(A) 21 it doesn't have an obligation to tell CMS that, for 22 instance, we are deciding to reduce inpatient rates by 23 ten percent.

24 THE COURT: Right.

25 MR. MACDONALD: We've duly noticed --

1 THE COURT: You're saying under the statute
2 that the state has enacted the state thinks it doesn't 3 have an obligation. Is that what your argument is?

4 MR. MACDONALD: No. I'm saying just as a 5 practical matter under existing CMS statutes and 6 regulations there's no obligation for the state to 7 tell CMS, to my knowledge, that it has published the 8 rates and it's provided the methodology. In other 9 words, it's completely self-enforcing. I mean, it's 10 an obligation that the state takes on, but it's in no 11 way meaningfully monitored by CMS. That's my point.
12 Do you understand?

13 THE COURT: No.

14 MR. MACDONALD: Okay.

15 THE COURT: What's your -- your procedural 16 argument, as I understand it, is that they are 17 obligated to give notice. Anything that amends the 18 plan or the effective enforcement of the plan that 19 would be qualified as an amendment must be noticed.
20 You've got to tell CMS so they can decide whether it's 21 okay or not.

22 MR. MACDONALD: Correct. The state says that 23 in reducing these rates they don't need to do that.

24 THE COURT: Oh, okay. You're not conceding 25 they don't.

1 MR. MACDONALD: Absolutely not.

2 THE COURT: It sounded like you were 3 conceding they had no obligation to.

4 MR. MACDONALD: I'm sorry, your Honor, but 5 they don't. There's nothing that requires just think 6 narrowly on 13(A) and the requirements of 13(A), 7 providing notice and all of the different hoops that 8 the state has to jump through before reducing or 9 making adjustments on rates. The state is not 10 obligated to tell CMS that in each individual instance 11 it has done that.

12 THE COURT: Okay.

13 MR. MACDONALD: So CMS would have no
14 knowledge whether the state is or is not complying 15 with the public process requirements. That's simply 16 my point.

17 So CMS is in a vacuum with respect to the 18 13(A) obligations, and therefore --

19 THE COURT: You're just saying that just adds 20 to the notion of ineffective remedy -- the 21 administrative remedy.

22 MR. MACDONALD: Exactly. Exactly.

23 The state makes a brief argument in its 24 papers at least -- Attorney Smith didn't mention it 25 but I'll mention it while I'm up here -- that somehow

1 the repeal of the Boren Amendment precludes a cause of 2 action here. And I just -- I think that's an issue 3 that was effectively addressed by Judge Boudin in 4 Long Term Care. Whatever the repeal of the Borne 5 Amendment did doesn't touch the rights -- the newly 6 created rights under Section 13(A).

7 And the reference to the committee report
8 language -- House Committee report language really 9 doesn't support what the state is saying at all.

10 I would also respectfully suggest that the 11 statute rather than the report language -- and the 12 statute as interpreted by the First Circuit would 13 control over the report language in any event.

14 But the point that I would leave the Court
15 with is the architecture of what's supposed to happen 16 here, which is the state decides it wants to make a 17 change to the rates. 13(A) says we want to front-end 18 that process. We want the state to reach out there 19 and tell people what they're going to do and why 20 they're doing it and receive data back so that they 21 can make -- the state can make an informed decision.
22 That's important to the process.

23 THE COURT: Well, that's what happened to 24 Long Term Care. They adjusted the rate change that 25 they were going with.

1 MR. MACDONALD: That's right. And it's so 2 important to the process and underscores really the 3 remedy we're asking for here, because absent this 4 remedy that part of the process can't take place.
5 There's no meaningful enforcement.

6 Attorney O'Connell described sort of the 7 closed loop system that the state is trying to create 8 here. They can raise or lower the rates, not tell 9 CMS, not provide meaningful opportunity for notice and 10 comment to providers, and not be subject to -- at 11 least under 13 on either decision -- any meaningful 12 judicial review. That is a complete closed loop, and 13 that cannot be the law.

14 With that, your Honor, I thank you for your 15 time.

16 THE COURT: I appreciate it. Thank you, Mr.
17 MacDonald. Attorney Smith, any rebuttal?

18 MS. SMITH: Pardon?

19 THE COURT: You reserved time to -- oh, I'm 20 sorry. Mr. Chapman. I'm sorry.

21 MS. SMITH: I was going to wait for Attorney
22 Chapman to finish.

23 THE COURT: Thank you. I appreciate it.
24 Sorry.

25 MR. CHAPMAN: Thank you, your Honor. May it

1 please the Court. The state in responding to the 2 irreparable harm argument that is in our reply in 3 support of the motion for preliminary injunction 4 characterized it as a presumption of irreparable harm
5 for lack of notice.

6 This morning in court the state characterized 7 the argument as a presumption of irreparable harm for 8 violation of a statute. That's not our argument.

9 In Long Term Care, the lower court decision
10 that Attorney MacDonald referred to, the Court found 11 that a violation of the federal Medicaid Act 12 necessarily inflicts irreparable harm upon the persons 13 that the act was designed to protect. And the Court
14 cited the Virgin Island case, a Third Circuit case 15 that talked about the body of law that provides that a 16 violation of a statute that harms the public is a 17 violation for which the Court can find irreparable
18 harm.

19 And here we clearly have a program that 20 Congress intended benefit the most needy people in the 21 country who need medical care, the Medicaid program.
22 This is a public statute that protects the public.
23 It's the kind of statute that the Third Circuit was 24 talking about in the Virgin Island case.

25 Now, in response the state cites the Romero

1 case and the Village of Gambell case. Neither -- the 2 latter of those cases, Village of Gambell, comes after 3 the Virgin Island case. It says nothing about the 4 Virgin Island case, so it's silent on that point.

5 This Court in a decision in the Nationwide
6 Mutual Insurance, which we cite in our brief at page 7 18, footnote 15, commented on Virgin Island and the 8 Long Term Care case as standing for the proposition 9 that a violation of a statute that protects the public 10 interest is irreparable harm.

11 The other point that I want to bring out -- 12 and it's not briefed, and I have the cases for the 13 Court and for the parties because we didn't know the 14 State's position on the two Supreme Court cases. And 15 what I've done is I've given the Court the Sierra Club 16 v. Marsh, which relies in part on the Commonwealth of 17 Massachusetts v. Watt. Both of these cases were 18 authored by then Judge Breyer.

19 And I've highlighted for the Court's benefit, 20 since we didn't discuss it in our brief, the sections 21 of the case -- of the Sierra Club case that I think 22 bear directly on the argument that the state was 23 making, and it really is a supplementary argument that 24 we made.

25 Essentially what Judge Breyer said is to

1 determine what harm is you need to look at the nature
2 and the structure and the purpose of a statute.

3 And in the village of -- or excuse me. In 4 Sierra Club he was dealing with the National 5 Environment Protection Act, and he characterized that 6 act as an act intended to ensure that decision makers, 7 the administrators, have a sufficient amount of 8 information before making a decision, before starting 9 a chain of actions that would be hard to stop once 10 they started.

11 That's the kind of statute that we're dealing 12 with here, as Attorney MacDonald talked about. 13(A) 13 is a process statute to ensure that state
14 administrators are informed of the relevant 15 information before they make an adjustment to the 16 Medicaid rates. And failing to follow that procedure 17 means that the administrators necessarily are not 18 making an informed decision.

19 And almost as though he anticipated a case
20 like this, in Sierra Club Judge Breyer talked about 21 the state not spending a sufficient amount of money to 22 do something and then trying to stop that process once
23 it gets started. Here, by not following the process 24 and by making a decision that has had the kind of 25 fiscal impact on both the hospitals and potentially on

1 the Medicaid recipients, what happens? The hospitals 2 begin a series of actions to try to adjust that are 3 very hard to unwind. The state gets accustomed to a 4 level of revenue that is very hard -- particularly in 5 certain political circumstances -- to unwind.

6 That's the irreparable harm here. The 7 failure to follow a process to lead to an informed 8 decision. Thank you.

9 THE COURT: Thank you. I appreciate it, Mr.
10 Chapman. Attorney Smith.

11 MS. SMITH: Just a couple of points. It is 12 apparent from what has been said here today that the 13 argument about irreparable harm that Attorney Chapman
14 has just made only applies to their 13(A) claims, not 15 the 30(A) claims. At least that was the argument that 16 I just heard.

17 THE COURT: He probably disagrees.

18 MS. SMITH: I'm just going on what I just 19 heard because he said it's about the process, and that 20 is the 13(A) argument, not the 30(A) argument. So 21 there's still on that argument definitely -- if we get 22 to that point -- the need to show irreparable harm
23 regarding the 30(A) claims.

24 On the 13(A) issues -- I have not had a 25 chance to look at these. This is something that was

1 raised in the reply to the objection on the 2 preliminary injunction, so we addressed what we 3 thought the argument was.

4 If we come -- rather than having another
5 round of briefings, I would suggest that we would like 6 an opportunity to respond to these cases, if we have 7 to come back in January, at that hearing rather than 8 have another round of briefings.

9 THE COURT: That's fine. Actually, if you
10 just want to be prepared in January, that's fine, too.
11 I don't want to impose on you anymore writing than 12 you've already undertaken.

13 MS. SMITH: I would propose that is the way 14 you respond to these rather than doing it today on the 15 irreparable harm argument.

16 THE COURT: I'll give you a chance to say you
17 disagree.

18 MS. SMITH: Just to go back and pick up on a 19 couple of points, Attorney O'Connell made the 20 representation to the Court that RSA 126-A:3 is not in 21 any way reflected in the state plan, and we contend 22 that is not correct.

23 If there's an inpatient section of the state 24 plan and an outpatient section of the state plan, 25 sometimes they get -- I get them reversed, but in

1 1999 -- ever since 1999 I believe it was the inpatient
2 section has contained in that section -- after they go
3 through and talk about the whole DRG coding, DRG 4 analysis that the price per point is based on, and 5 then at the end it says that after you figure that out 6 then what is paid is then subject to both a federal 7 budget neutrality factor and a state budget neutrality
8 factor.

9 And in 2006 there was a state plan amendment 10 submitted regarding the outpatient piece, which is 11 state plan 06-008, I believe, in our attachments.
12 That says that outpatient rates are to be paid on a 13 percentage of charges on an interim basis and that 14 there are final payments based on a percentage of 15 cost, and then it says that the department determines 16 the percentage that will be paid.

17 So that leaves -- that inserted into the 18 state plan what is in 126-A:3, that the payments will 19 be based on a percentage that may fluctuate. So we 20 submit that the state plan does reflect 126-A:3.

21 Another issue on that point -- and I think 22 this was more -- Attorney Gordon said that the state
23 doesn't tell CMS anything, you know, basically about 24 what it's doing about rates and there's no obligation
25 to do that. And in our surreply, page 11, we went

1 through an analysis of the federal regulations about 2 requiring -- whether rates themselves are required to 3 be in the state plan and pointed out the distinction
4 between the requirement of what's in the state plan 5 for the methods and procedure for determining the 6 rates and the rates themselves.

7 And then what's significant in that is that 8 the federal regulations set out a process for the 9 state to be advising CMS of what it's actually doing 10 as far as fluctuation in rates. And that's in -- 11 Section 447.255 requires that with assurances about 12 whether or not access is still being provided -- and 13 this is something that's being done on an annual 14 basis -- that the Medicaid agency must submit the 15 amount by which the estimated average rate increased 16 or decreased relative to the average payment rate and 17 in fact for each type of provider for the immediately 18 preceding rate period.

19 And going forward, I know that in the 20 preliminary injunction that the proposed CMS 21 regulations that are not in effect yet have been 22 submitted that would give further definition to this 23 reporting process and what's expected of states in the 24 future, but we pointed out that -- and the department 25 does annual reports, and in each of those annual

1 reports there's an appendix that has indicated the 2 changes, including each percent -- you know, like the 3 2008 changes in the percentage of rates. Those were 4 in the annual reports, and those are certainly made 5 available to CMS.

6 So the idea that the department is hiding
7 what they have done as far as applying these factors 8 from CMS so that the Secretary couldn't come back and 9 say, we think you have a problem, you know, it just 10 doesn't square with the regulations or with what has 11 been done -- the reporting that has been done.

12 On the Long Term Care case I would just go
13 back and point the Court to one sentence in that case 14 at page 54. This is where it starts talking about 15 13(A) and it says after the -- it is a paragraph that 16 starts, "broadly speaking". The last sentence in that 17 paragraph says that the Commonwealth, the state of 18 Massachusetts, assumes that if Long Term's members are 19 providing nursing facility services such numbers 20 represented by Long Term are entitled to sue as 21 providers in federal court to enjoin violations of 22 Section 13(A) that affect their interests.

23 Therefore, the State of Massachusetts didn't 24 raise the issue of whether or not 13(A) provided a 25 cause of action. They assumed that it would if they

1 were providers. That's why Long Term Care didn't 2 really decide that question.

3 THE COURT: Well, I think everybody agrees 4 it's not, strictly speaking, a law school holding of 5 the case. Were you briefing it in an appropriate law
6 school class you would not write, holding, 13(A) 7 provides -- but the question is does it? And you're 8 saying everybody thinks so, but it doesn't.

9 MS. SMITH: What we are pointing out is --

10 THE COURT: Everybody in the First Circuit
11 thinks so, but it doesn't.

12 MS. SMITH: They've never been asked to 13 address that question.

14 THE COURT: I understand. No. That's not 15 true. They've addressed the question. It just isn't, 16 strictly speaking, a holding as a law student and a 17 lawyer and a judge would understand the term holding.
18 It's a term of art. As a term of art, you're quite 19 correct, it is not a holding of the case.

20 Okay. Now the question remains, is there a 21 cause of action created? Well, has anybody ever 22 spoken about the issue, discussed it? Yes. As a 23 matter of fact, the First Circuit has discussed it.
24 Gee, what did they say? They said it does. Is that a 25 holding binding on me? No. Is it persuasive that

1 they think it does? A little bit. Could I say, well, 2 it may be what you think, but it's not a holding and I
3 think differently? Yes, I could do that. But I think 4 Mr. MacDonald's point was, but it might be persuasive.

5 MS. SMITH: We would respectfully submit that 6 if they went through the analysis and were asked to 7 really determine whether there are rights they may not 8 have --

9 THE COURT: Well, do you disagree that you
10 are obligated to give notice and discuss what you plan 11 to do with regard to rates and the methodology and 12 reason why and then publish the rates and explain the 13 methodology behind them? If you're required to do all 14 of that and you didn't do it -- I know you say we did, 15 but if you didn't do that, don't you agree that there
16 would be a cause of action under 13(A) by a hospital 17 to come forward and say, wait a minute, the procedural 18 requirements have not been followed. I at least get 19 to come into court and say that, don't I?

20 MS. SMITH: The Second and Third Circuits
21 have said no.

22 THE COURT: I understand. So you disagree?

23 MS. SMITH: We claim there's not a cause of 24 action for it. They could certainly have -- as they 25 have done -- raised it with CMS. The hospitals have

1 raised these issues with CMS, came back and asked us 2 what we did. So there's certainly notice to the 3 Secretary. And the process -- the agreement between 4 the state and the federal government is that CMS can 5 certainly come back and tell the state you need to do 6 something else.

7 THE COURT: And if there's some unholy
8 alliance between the state and the Secretary, too bad 9 for the providers?

10 MS. SMITH: If CMS is satisfied that the 11 notice we gave was adequate --

12 THE COURT: No. I'm saying assume that the 13 Secretary and the department on a federal level and 14 the Secretary and the department on a state level over 15 a cup of coffee decide, you know what, pure fiscal, 16 that's the only concern, good enough, we're going to 17 wink at that and let that go. The hospitals have no 18 recourse. The enforcer has decided that that's okay, 19 and there's no recourse by a provider? There's 20 nowhere they can go? There's no court that that can 21 be heard in to say that's not what Congress provided 22 in the law, that's not the law of the land and the 23 parties are not observing the law, and there's no 24 court in this land that can do anything about it?
25 That just seems to be an odd perception.

1 MS. SMITH: There is not always a causative
2 action for everything.

3 THE COURT: Well, Marvin versus Madison kind 4 of suggested that there should be.

5 MS. SMITH: There is a process. The 6 providers would have other avenues to try and address
7 this. They can certainly lobby with the legislatures, 8 which they do, for a different --

9 THE COURT: But how does that help? The 10 legislature says, yes, consider these other factors, 11 and the administrations on both the federal and state 12 level say, well, thanks for your advice, but I don't 13 think so.

14 MS. SMITH: I'm hesitating because I know
15 that when -- and the CMS process in regard to state 16 plan amendments -- and I'm hesitating because I don't 17 know if there are other ways to do that, but the 18 providers can intervene in the process at CMS where a 19 state plan amendment is disapproved. If the state 20 appeals with CMS then --

21 THE COURT: No. I'm just talking about just 22 a rank, blank failure, refusal to comply with the law 23 as written. We're just not going to do that. We are 24 not going to consider the effects on the delivery of 25 Medicaid services in determining this rate setting.

1 We're just not going to do it. We're not doing it.

2 We didn't do it. We're proud of the fact that we 3 didn't do it. And you're saying hospitals have no 4 place to go because the regulator and the state have 5 winked at each other and decided that's okay.

6 You seem to be saying, well, there's still no 7 cause of action. There's no Ex parte Young. There's 8 no nothing. Too bad.

9 Because Congress would be upset about that 10 theoretically, right? Congress would say, these 11 aren't letters to our friends. These are laws. We 12 expect people to comply with them. If they don't 13 comply with them, there's a mechanism. You get 14 prosecuted. You get sued. You go to court. The 15 courts establish what the problem is. The courts 16 issue a remedy. It gets enforced by the executive.
17 There's a system. It works. But it doesn't work if 18 there's no place to go and nobody has standing.

19 MS. SMITH: Where Congress has designated 20 CMS, the Secretary, as being the enforcing mechanism 21 and the remedy, then that is the sole remedy that 22 Congress set out.

23 THE COURT: You may be right. It just 24 strikes me as an odd perception.

25 All right. I promised Mr. Chapman I would

1 give him -- unless you're -- are you done?

2 MS. SMITH: No. That was my last point.

3 THE COURT: Mr. Chapman, I assume you
4 disagree.

5 MR. CHAPMAN: Thank you, your Honor. I just 6 want to make clear that although I talked about 13(A), 7 the irreparable harm argument about decision makers
8 having the necessary information to come to the right 9 decision in the first instance applies to 30(A). And 10 the reason it applies to 30(A) is that it's our 11 position that 30(A) has a procedural component to it.

12 And if you look at part of 30(A) -- Attorney 13 Smith talked about 30(A) was enacted to give the 14 states more flexibility and to ensure or safeguard 15 against unnecessary utilization, and it does say that.
16 It also talks about unnecessary utilization that are 17 consistent with efficiency, economy, quality of care, 18 and sufficient to enlist enough providers to service
19 the Medicaid population.

20 Now, how's the state going to get that 21 information? CMS -- and this is referred to on page 22 33 of our opening memo in support of the preliminary 23 injunction. CMS takes the position that the state 24 needs to get the input of Medicaid beneficiaries and 25 Medicaid stakeholders, i.e., hospitals, to ensure that

1 a rate change will still permit the necessary services 2 to be provided.

3 So, yes, indeed our irreparable harm argument
4 applies to 30(A), as well.

5 THE COURT: Great. Thank you. Anything
6 else? Attorney Smith? Attorney MacDonald? Attorney
7 O'Connell? All right. Thank you very much. I 8 appreciate it.

9 (Conclusion of Hearing at 11:20 a.m.)

10

11

12

13

14

15

16

17

18

19

20

21

22

23

24

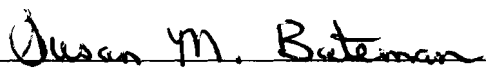

25

1
2
3
4
5
6
7
8
9
10
11
12
13
14
15
16
17
18
19 20
21
22
23
24
25

C E R T I F I C A T E

I, Susan M. Bateman, do hereby certify that the foregoing transcript is a true and accurate transcription of the within proceedings, to the best of my knowledge, skill, ability and belief.

Submitted: 12-21-11

SUSAN M. BATEMAN, LCR, RPR, CRR
LICENSED COURT REPORTER, NO. 34
STATE OF NEW HAMPSHIRE